

WORDS?

What is the mind? From the Void, the universe comes forth, then the Point; density, temperature, vibration, vibrations. Strings, quarks, positions-spin, interactions, protons, particles, neutrons, atoms, molecules, conscious life, mind. A separate mind is inconceivable, but surely the Universal mind exists, fruit of the immense interaction between all the apparent separated components of the Universe.

Apparently separate particles, grains of sand, blown by the wind, dunes, desert.

Which grain of sand is the best? The one submerged by a myriad of other grains or the one that soars in the sky? No mind, if compared to a grain, is superior in the one desert.

The Void which is our origin is a material “desert,” but an Infinity of Thusness, an Infinity of Universes with Infinite Laws which has a Name everywhere that is not Its name. Here we call It the Absolute.

Can a mind, even if it is Universal - but still infinitesimal compared to the infinite universes - comprehend Infinity?

This is the dilemma, this is the Search.