

ON THE AVATAR

The second part of piece 102 (On duality for demons as only “beings”) is devoted to the “bad”, after all 102 does represent duality.

We cannot only speak of the “good”; we must speak also of the “bad”; the “bad” are indispensable to chose to be “good”: how would we be able to say we were good if they weren’t around too?

We need a touchstone then we can assert: “if these are bad then the others are good”.

I have already explained several times that the intentions of the ego, of loving identities, of good resolutions, of wanting to do, are all very interesting but it is also necessary to discover our “non-being”.

After all, somebody must pull the strings of the “avatar puppet”...

What will your Avatar be?

The Intellect, The Soul and the Spirit: this is the Avatar that moves the “puppet”, those puppets that act in life and are concerned with their trivial “things”.

The “puppet” is physical, sensations, astral, hormones and mind.

What drives the “puppet”? The wind as it blows.

The “puppet” is moved by the wind; it is moved by all the natural elements around us.

Thank you for having been active, even reading hundreds of Useless Words, some in one direction, some in another, some in one way, some in another.... Driven by events, life, problems, fears, the little things that take our fancy and move the more “corpulent”, more concrete being: the “puppet” you are all dealing with.

It’s the puppet who’s been participating so far.

In many of you there have been “flickers of Avatar”, of the One inside.

We say Avatar now because it’s the title of a film¹, in the future we’ll say something different.

On some occasions we have also spoken of this as “intellect” (one part), or “entanglement”, defining it in a rather technical manner (sub-nuclear physics).

The Soul has until now been the topic of religious discourse.

We don’t do “pious deeds”, we try to act with that unknown “question mark” that should be the moving force of the “puppet”. The true drive of this “puppet” is a problem, let’s come to some agreement because you seriously have to learn to use it. Indeed it is difficult! Identifying with the “puppet” makes you feel tired and off balance, what with all the events that happen to “puppets”, constantly and in every part of the world.

We are united by the “strange” resolve to reach a Real “achievement” that, from one point of view, can seem macroscopic and magnified.

You are here, and you occupy a certain space. “Here” is not in time; together we do not occupy time.

Together time becomes a problem, because for me this life or the next one, past 11111 lives or future lives... it’s all the same. For you it isn’t! In this life you all shift for yourselves: you wake up in the morning thinking only of how you’re going to get by.

¹ Avatar, by James Cameron.

Imagine instead beings who “wake up” in one life and do what they have to do without letting anything distract them.

They act according to what has been determined, with all possible and imaginable options.

I haven't decided anything, so I'm not interested. What happens is in harmony with the Base.

For me what matters is the space occupied: we are occupying this space and, contemporarily, in one “streak”, in one single entanglement, we occupy a bit of space inside the universe, in a sequence of apparent “frames” that we connect via consciousness.

Movie cameras once had works with little gear teeth which hitched on to the film and made it turn. One could see a series of spaces occupied by a sequence of freeze-frames and, looking at the screen, one got a three-dimensional feeling; on the contrary it was a flat photograph, without time... whoever was watching found themselves organizing time with their own minds, without even being aware of it.

A film has no time because each freeze-frame is without time.

Beings are without time; they create time like in a movie and believe it is reality.

Now, imagine a “poor” Avatar who is holding a film reel and says: “What are going to do now? See the film again. Let's get this movie going...”

Life begins, the experiment begins and we set off again: “Hey lads, harmony and union”.

The film began when a few sentient beings began to “seek” saying: “Master, we want to meditate, what must we do?”.

That poor “non-being”, looking at them, replied: “seeking is the suppression of the modifications of the mind”.

You cannot start seeing a film from the last spaces, you have to see it from the beginning and it's obligatory to recapitulate.

Ok, let's see the film from the beginning! Then we can rightly enjoy the “new beginning”.

Indeed it's quite simple: you have to be ready to “not-be”, it's necessary.

You had fun being? You organised yourselves to get hurt? You got hurt! You're good at hurting yourselves! No amount of concentration and meditation in order to achieve “non-being” is going to help.

We can't even always “not be”, meditating non-stop. While you're there meditating, looking at the sky and smiling at everybody, the world is going to rack and ruin. That reminds me of Damanhur², a community in the north of Italy where everyone is happy and looks at you with that endorphin-generated “stupefied” expression!

If you ask anyone of them: “Are you well?” they'll reply: “Yes, because the Lord is in each one of us”. If you ask: “Have you achieved happiness?” they'll say: “Yes, here everything is peace and love” (subterranean escape in order not to hear the world suffering).

² Founded in 1975, it has a population of about 1.000 citizens and spreads over about 500 hectares in the foothills of the Piedmontese Alps.

I heard that an American Buddhist in is considered to be the happiest man on earth: he wakes up in the morning and does his own thing, meditates and does his own thing, gets to the evening and he's done his own things... No wonder he's happy, he's got nothing to do but "meditate for himself".

They call it "happiness", they define him the happiest man on earth... I'd say he's the most selfish man on earth.

Those from Damanhur and other similar organisations (by all means very pleasant) are for me real experts in the art of their own ego.

I visited the underground temple that they built digging inside the mountain for more than 10 years.

They are experts at "let's do our own thing", which is hardly a generous choice.

I believe that everyone, deep inside, has a bit of altruism but in these sentient beings I really can't see any at all!

When you cannot see even a minimum of altruism, if not the mental kind, nor the tiniest bit of concern for other people, you begin to smell a rat.

You have all been committed in different ways, each in their own personal manner, to this "event" where the point of no return (end of 2009) was quite explicit.

The strategy is dictated by the Base and it clashes with the intentions of the world, the establishment, religions, of people who are all "being".

This is the big problem.

But what does a "non-being" care about behaving like a "moneybags" who's hoarding up treasures for his tomb?

Do you realize that some people have become excessively rich (to the extent of being able to feed all of mankind) thanks to the fairy tales for idiots?

And what's worse is that the masses believe in them! Will you wake up or won't you?

How can we accumulate riches establishing prizes and punishments only because someone ... lived, feeble and subservient?

Unfortunately, this supine humanity does not see such a heap of nonsense as appalling and distressing! The fact is that people get used to the fairy tales that have been served out to them and get hooked on them.

Beings are awakened by showing them that the "puppet" is managed, whilst there does exist a subtle entanglement with the laws of the universe: communication via various forms of interaction, already explained.

You think you are completely separated and affirm: "I am I".

I too am I, with you, in that me.

You too are "me" in that other being, with that "me".

And yet you are stubborn and insist on saying: "No, I am me! The breath coming out of my mouth is mine, everything that comes out and goes into my body, it's all mine!

In fact, the air and the water that pass through us all were once clouds, once rain, once urine, and once a glass of water.

Do you really think you are "you"? Do you think you will lose yourself and appear before the Absolute as if you only were at the Threshold...

Oh, yes of course! All for you! A beautiful arch with flowers and crowns! Actually, a wonderful colossally rich tomb, all yours.

And then?

Let's not think about the Spirit, forget it! It gets too complicated to think about these things for a humanity living in a world full of egotism, violence and prevarication and abuse.

For example, a group of beings working to resolve hunger in the world today, in the eyes of many, could look like only a group of "poor delirious things".

Try explaining how much strength is needed to know how to live as a being, without losing your concentration for Non Being.

There wouldn't have been any Zen and the art of bike maintenance otherwise.

As a being I'll do my utmost to get you to achieve your goals, as Non Being I'll try to act as a mirror to you.

In "time" you too will begin to push without hands (in new spaces).

Until now you have been pushing with your hands, i.e. with your mind, with the intellect, each to the extent of their own commitment, even with a little help, without hands it's difficult... it's much better, but it's difficult.

What you have to do is achieve Non Being, so that finally the "puppeteer" behind each one of you can come out (AVATAR).

First you move a few strings, and it's the intellect. Then there's the determination of the Path in the story that must be created, and it's the Soul that determines that.

If then the strings move all together, the puppeteer gives a Unique Performance and one comes to an agreement, with the Great Architect of the system, of course. (ENIGMA).

As "beings" we have completed what we were supposed to; as "We" it was obvious we would succeed, because when beings are "We/Us" they easily manage to accomplish whatever they want to, whilst if they are identified with "I/me" they come up against all the problems deriving from the ego: they have to move, divide things up and put them in a logical sequence; a Realized-One has to respect spaces (times), freeze-frames, the differences between beings, between seekers and so forth.

Obviously, I don't care about any of all this, it's clearly understood from these useless words!

You have to learn to work "shoulder to shoulder".

What does that mean?

Indeed, it's an incorrect expression, which I have never liked because it still expresses separation between beings.

"My" shoulder, "your" shoulder It's still separation!

Why don't we work Point to Point?

There must be a little separation... the Soul.

But, point to point over here is one line only over There that terminates in a single One Point. The line is made up of infinite points... Perhaps someone will find the Energy of this line, the Energy of the boundary, the Energy of the void. (The Force of Permanent-Unifying Gravity).³

³ Often philosophy achieves what science doesn't DARE.

Remember that the void is form and form is void (then you'll really learn it, and not just the words, like some who haven't understood what I'm talking about).

We don't need shoulder to shoulder! Point to point!

With "point to point" the void is form and form is void.

On the other side, the line of the void is quite a separation from the Absolute (illusory); on this side, the apparent separation of the points is form.

By now you have understood, with that energy you have the possibility to do everything, without that energy you toil and struggle!

Better without toiling and struggling!

Why bother to use only the "being"?

It would be better if you learned to use the non-being, so then you'll become "capable, smarter, more subtle". (Not of all this but so it seems).

The path is long and perilous, you'll encounter many difficulties, but if now you are occupying this space then it's clear you aren't far off (space as readers).

Reading these writings, you have the opportunity to understand.

Many of you have not understood what "occupying a space" means.

For example: even if we watch the same film each one of us will understand it in their own way, but if we occupy the same space to see the same film, probably, we become entangled on the same line.

If beings feel they are a point alongside other points they will easily see that form is void and the void is form.

Now you are experiencing form, you only have to realize that you are also the void.

It isn't difficult: just stop thinking and stop having an identity, you just have to realize that the real force comes from this... and the space you are occupying is occupied well.

Of course we could not have fractured, poisoned and upturned "spaces", because then, the line created would have snapped.

It would have meant that the "pen" wasn't working.

The pen that traces and tells, with the very life of the universe, the story of the Freedom of the Absolute in that system does not leave empty spaces, it eliminates them. That separation is fundamental, because we need indissoluble cohesion, otherwise how would you proceed with the necessary information to give and return in a universe, in order to continue according to your level, teachings, learning?

It is a continuation even of things that you may not have wanted and, perhaps, they have happened.

Many of you still live of selfishness and needs. It's normal to think "I've done little, I've been careless, I didn't carry through what I had determined to do, I wavered..." and other such thoughts.

I know you all, "each one of you is what I have been and you will be what I am" (someone wrote on his tomb).

If in one of your previous lives, where you were going hungry, you shared your only piece of bread with someone who, suffering from hunger like you, was watching you without asking a thing, then the rules have placed you in this "space", even though you have no memory of such an event.

There are rules.

You occupy the space given to you, not time.

You find yourselves in a certain space, which you need to learn a few “things”.

I respect the rules; it couldn't be otherwise... not even for a joke would I not do so.

If a being occupies a certain space, what should I do?

I cannot do anything; I can't criticize the quality of the chunk of bread that has been offered, I have nothing to do with such problems; it's the Lord's “business”, not mine, He is The Only Judge.

I have the certainty that what happens is always right; therefore if you occupy this “space” it means it's yours.

The “things” I'm writing are yours, in total respect of the Laws of the Absolute.

How could it be otherwise? You cannot oppose His Perfection.

Since you cannot contest I'll proceed and “We” will comply with what we have determined.

You have probably begun to understand that it is the space you have occupied that allows you to read, regardless whether you remember or not your previous existences; independently from the fact that in this life you have done much or wavered, or have made a greater or lesser effort... it's all the same!

If “today”, here where there is food in abundance, you give away a kilo of bread rolls and ham, do you realize how much you are giving away? A thousandth part of all your food.

If instead, in one of your past existences you had only a chunk of dry bread and you halved it with someone who was suffering from hunger like you, what did you give? You gave half of your life, because you could have died giving up half of your meal. In fact you didn't know if you'd find any more.

Would you be ready to give half of your life now?

If during a famine someone said to you: “give me half of your food” would you feed him?

It would be a huge gesture.

You cannot work things out that way. I don't even do that, I only say what may happen.

I don't count, He is the Accountant. I fulfil my obligations and proceed. Even if I'm not obliged to reach my goal.

Really I don't care about the goal, just as I don't care about dying, about ending up in prison, being hanged or whatever. For me it's the same (even living joyfully and ironically).

I have no interest in any sort of event.

You want everything to be positive, you need this; I don't need positive nor negative, it's the same to me.

If you had been an assembly of demons it would have been the same, we would have learnt together the rule in duality. You happened to come, researchers/seekers, because we had to carry through our objective: evidently you distributed many chunks of bread. Congratulations, you have been “good”!

(I'm speaking as if everything had been accomplished)

Gradually you will learn to work as a team or in tandem, even if you are not used to it, but as long as it's only "I" and "me" you'll encounter difficulties and discomfort. I often go in tandem and sit on the back seat, where there aren't even any pedals and you're not doing the riding.

I just sit, and let The Other do the riding: He pedals, He sees the road...

Aren't you scared of colliding into something?

Well, He would be the first to collide! (Therefore it'll never happen).

But, if you fall, you'd get hurt while He wouldn't

And I trust Him! If I don't trust Him, who can I trust?

Instead you are there with your bikes, alone, and pedalling. You don't even have a partner who's pedalling and driving.

You have to drive, you have to pedal: Oh my, what an effort just to be only "me", to be only "being"! (surreal example, just for a change).

Now have you understood what "Avatar" means?

Do you think, perhaps, there's somebody who isn't "Avatar"?

The Avatar is there, but you don't let it work, you're all full and triumphant with: me, me, me...

Well then, go on, you do the pedalling, you drive!

You are identified with the physical, the sensations and the mind... Go ahead, there is no-one obliging you to be "non-being", or forcing to be serene and peaceful regardless of all events.

"The world is against us!" Some say.

Against who?

To the "being"?

If you present yourself as a "being" they'll destroy you, if you present yourself as "non-being" they are hurting themselves.

Sorry, but I'm not part of it. And if I'm not taking part, I'm not here!

So, try to understand how this works: either you participate or you don't.

But, not participating does not mean doing nothing, it means doing everything without the effort that you think you have to make.

It seems so intuitive to me.

I'm ready to do everything, but don't ask me to struggle: where "I" doesn't reach let's leave it to God, where the "being" can't manage to let the "non-being" proceed, where they slap you on one cheek, turn the other cheek; where you are present and get hurt, position the one who isn't there and doesn't get hurt.

Clear?

Some might say: "How simple, if only I had thought of it before!"

All that struggling..."

2010 is the first year for those who will experience the new universe, not for those who will remain in this one, or go backwards, or move sideways, to the right or to the left, upwards or downwards. (ENIGMA)

A new universe is an achievement, did you know that? For now it's science fiction, but when you're functioning, you'll see that science fiction becomes a reality.

From understanding we'll move on to evolution, get on with it...

In order to evolve beings have to eat!

The system has to be understood, studied, and put aside then, when your existence is completed, you will have achieved skilful means.

This is what you need to understand! You need to understand how to proceed, in giving support to humanity.

In the next universe you'll all be together!

Now and again I'll drop by to check, it's my hobby.

In piece 101 (On interaction) it says "the shaman is concerned () with a certain type of entanglement. If you learn to do to a greater extent what you already are, you'll be more concretely involved in those entanglement relations that will go towards creating "the right situation", the one that each one has already chosen.

When it is an "I" that decides, everything is more difficult.

Two Entities, one Real but apparent, the Avatar and the "puppet", the situation is right if it is the Avatar who creates it, when the "puppet" wants to create it is almost always wrong.

The Avatar always decides what all the "Others" (all the souls) decide. He does not decide anything impossible, he necessarily has to decide by an entanglement with the entire universe.

He does not wake up one morning and say: "I'm fed up, one billion two hundred million people are starving to death. You know what? I'm the Avatar, I decide and do just as I like".

He cannot do just as he pleases, he's just any being and, like all the other idiots, says: "It bothers me to have a full belly when a billion two hundred million people are starving to death".

Of course we can all say: "Why doesn't the Lord think about it?".

He is "thinking" about it! You haven't realized that He's "thinking" by NON-being.

In fact, he's trying to get to the result because the Avatar, all of him, is That One; and all beings, all separated, are this illusory and not The Real One.

Impossible things can't be done.

You can't do something that prevaricates or abuses the system itself even if it's normal, the pure at heart, the good people and the little "angels" would like everybody to eat.

Why can't it be done?

Because there's the "I" of the good person ... it's there, but it's not enough.

There has to be a particular condition in which the event can occur, because it is in agreement with the Nature of All Things that only the Avatar knows.

Those who are not Avatar don't know.

At any rate one does need to get ready.

Now it is permitted, in conformity with dates, stars, science and technology... with the approval of the Avatar-sum. Then, if the Avatar is a "puppet" or several "puppets", I don't mind in the least, because Nothing changes.

When I die I'm not going to say to Him: "Now give me a reward".

I won't ask for anything, I tried a few times, a long time ago, and I won't try anymore.

We have what's already here. We already have everything that He has given to us, why make a distinction between one small point and another on a Threshold?.

It's such an effort, what agony!

You always lose out in doing "the best". Do your best, you fool!

Doing "the same", I assure you, pays; and let the Others do the pedalling... the "Other" is the Same!

Have you understood? The game seems difficult but it isn't.

Everything you have been taught can be found written in all the books on human research; in all the Eastern philosophies and in some of the Western ones: for example Greek philosophy that borrowed heavily from Eastern ideas. (Robbery of ideas, values, philosophy, etc.)

You have to learn one thing: "my" freedom of will is the will of the Absolute; any will of mine is in any case in opposition, whatever the form of opposition, it is freedom.

"My" freedom is the Freedom of the Absolute, trying to separate it is foolish.

The Creation of the Absolute is He Himself with His Energy, believing you are "a fish out of its element" is certainly being dead.

One does not live off separation, one lives off Union, because losing what Is for what does not exist is almost foolish.

Inventing a "separate freedom", is still freedom: this way you become eternal demons.

I prefer a good "United Freedom", then my freedom becomes like His.

Perhaps you think it's too little?

Creating a small freedom is losing the Immense One.

Ah, what demonic foolishness!

Useless waste of effort, I have His at my disposition.

They say: "I'll make myself a small one, so it'll be all mine!"

The fish that caged itself inside a small bubble of water died suffocating in that same bubble, because the water wasn't enough for it to breath.

Really! How foolish it was! It had the entire sea but it closed itself in a bubble and there it died.

You, smart people... we are not "only one", .. we are separated, but up to the mind, that is freedom, from the intellect to the Soul is The Way of Union.

Time does not exist, I've already explained that many times. Therefore, towards space ... yes, Point Space.

The conceptual separation between being and non-being is trying to separate the point that makes up the line of the line. It is trying to separate the creature from the Creator. In reality both coexist and "co-live", this is called "overcoming dichotomy".

Mentally you are free and separate, but you are the same Energy.

The border is necessarily infinitesimal because you yourself are... infinitesimal creature.

Bordering who? The Absolute, Infinite Boundaries.

You might think, or worry, that the infinitesimal that opens onto the Infinite could remain, in a certain sense, in a mentally problematic situation.

Contemplation without seed is without time and without space; contemplation with seed is one point behind; meditation is outside that point; concentration is inside the created energies. The being you are at this particular moment, could be found between concentration and the created nature.

All this is connected and we are inside, in an oscillation of perceptions: physical, astral, mental, being, concentration, meditation, inner silence, Stillness, perception of the Nature of All Things, Soul Point, facing opposite, losing all possible references, connection, point, words ... everything.

In this oscillation, that we can determine, we have the concrete possibility to speculate overcoming dichotomy with words. Then this same concept is lost: the value of overcoming, the meaning of dichotomy, the total loss of consciousness to become His Consciousness. Mentally there is a block until one reaches the highest level of consciousness.

Complete abandonment really allows one to overcome the confines, where the perception of things loses illusory spatial and temporal dimensions.

This Nature of the Absolute becomes manifested in the being and, from that moment, will be called "Prophet", "Realized-One", "Buddha" and so on (not enlightened because demons are such).

But they won't recognise themselves in anyone of those names by which they are called, they'll recognise themselves only in what they are and what they "are not"; they know very well they are "I", they know very well they are "We", it'll be no problem for them to say "I" nor "We". Where's the difficulty?

There's a difficulty only for those who, identified with their ego, feel they're swearing when they say "We". "Poor things" they don't know that they can't not be. It's as if it were a sort of obligation. This doesn't mean losing the freedom of one's ego and achieving the Freedom of the Absolute... you've always had it! Since you were an Angel. You chose torment, suffering, the four sacred truths, separations, life, damages, illnesses, death...

Do you want me to say it as "me"? You made the choice! Do you want me to say it as "We"? "We" chose!

When it's "We", we chose, God and I! When I say "me", that "me" chose. I was the Angel! "We" were the Angel! Then, gradually and by choice, I became "me". (Playing with words to maintain the freedom and the boundaries).

The boundaries permit a different turn of phrase: on the one hand you are obliged by the ego, on the other you lose it and become "We".

And here comes the Avatar, the operator of the "puppet" with the Laws, the strings... You pull the strings so and the puppet moves so.

One cannot go outside of the Laws.

The Laws are such and the entanglement is such.

You cannot be outside the precise and scientific laws, otherwise we'd be dealing with "chance" and we'd all have done whatever pleased us.

It's true that we do as we please, but we do that so far as we are "me" while, in fact, we have a universal consciousness, with universal obligations: the others have to eat just as you are eating.

None of you say, while you're feeding yourselves, "now, with this food, I'll feed only the heart... not the liver, the kidneys and the lungs!"

No-one can make such a choice.

What a system this world is! Only six billion people out of seven eat.

If you become seekers you cannot decide, you have to get a move on to feed everybody. It's the vows you have made.

It seems difficult, and it's true that it is, it's difficult also because so far no-one's ever succeeded.

The number of those suffering from hunger has increased; therefore, this means there is a real impediment in resolving this serious problem.

The researcher/seeker doesn't mind the difficulty: what price is there to pay?

There's no price! It's all the same.

Pomponio doesn't suffer and has no problems; burnt alive or surviving, it's all the same for him.

Fro the researcher/seeker it's the same thing.

Any problem?

If inside yourselves you are at peace with the Absolute, all the rest is just child's play.

You have to be at peace with the Absolute, inside yourselves!

In the morning when you wake up, turning to Him you say: "Today I'll do this!"

In the evening, having done what you had determined, going to bed you'll say: "Did you check if I've done what I had promised? Everything ok? Goodnight".

If you're serene and at peace, there's no problem.

I think that the most important thing is the inner peace that comes from the good things we have done in our lives, all the rest is ... "Oh yes!" (see appendix).

Remember that for the sake of love, the true kind, we can make any change... but it has to be the real kind, not mental love, the phoney little game of love.

Opening the water tap you take part in the water that flows and then you do whatever you want. Fate? The fate of many is not eating, if I open the tap of Love (which is not anything of mine, it doesn't belong to me; just like the water from the Water-main does not belong to the fountain), I use the other Energy and do whatever I want. The only thing is that it weighs a lot.

An empty fountain weighs less than a full fountain.

How much does it weigh?

As much as you can take.

Crucifying or shooting someone is easy.

Gandhi and Martin Luther King died because they said certain things. Saying certain things weighs and if the weight is too great, then you're crushed. But for researchers/seekers it's the same.

The Game is wonderful precisely because It is like this. I've always enjoyed myself!

Stealing the wind from the king of ice is great fun. (Science fiction).

Wherever you go and wherever you are you must always be able to enjoy yourself, otherwise you'll hurt yourself.

Perhaps in another universe, instead of shooting you they freeze you.

You remain conscious and never die, till the end of the world. You'll have to wait for it, frozen and conscious.

What fun! With all that time available to meditate and contemplate!

Infinite are the universes and infinite will be the "games" awaiting you... you'll play them one at a time, so meanwhile have fun with this one, my dear Avatar.