

ON EXPERIMENTING

In the table of elements compiled by Massimo Corbucci, the black dividing area (between Lutetium and Hafnium and between Lawrencium and Rutherfordium) represents the quantummechanic vacuum, i.e. the most “vacuum-packed” point (the basement that connects all the “constructions” of the strings, the elements).

If we were to further “vacuumize”, we would identify the law that unifies the energies of the entire universe.

That law is found in the beginning point, where all energies unite: it is the void which you call gravity; most certainly not the effect, but rather the cause.

What is this unifying law? Can it be where the “vacuumisation” is absolute, at its fullest capacity, so much so that it is a small point? It is from there that the law of gravity derives.

It's quite simple; it's just a matter of moving backwards into the spaces occupied by events.

To say “backwards” in time is a whopper, a mistake; in space it might begin not to be.

Now, try to connect scientific studies with philosophy (something we now and again “pretend” to do together), with Zen (which has never led anyone to meditation)... and with those meditations that, actually, are not meditations since to meditate is to be oneself, whilst thinking is just being a “Free” anybody.

I think and I am free; when you think you are freer than I am in creating any type illusory ego; when you meditate you are more yourselves.

In truth meditating is being yourself, contemplating is no longer being yourself but something more “rarefied”.

Therefore to contemplate is not being; to meditate is being; to think is being that freedom separated from God, period.

Zen, meditation, concentration, prayers... so many nice things from which religions have sprung.

Religions have sprung from thoughts that have organized disasters all over the world: unfortunately until today they have been only systems that create hate and enmity between brothers; systems of suffering, death and killings. This is the example given to us by religions.

It is high time that, in this world, all beings began to rethink religions in order to truly discover themselves in their relationship with God.

It is difficult to get this concept through to people, because we have to respect all beings at whatever level, all differences.

Unfortunately it is difficult because, amongst you, there are some who still believe that God is “encountered” through rituals or a religion.

Many times it is painful not to respect those who believe through their minds, even if for me they are merely limited beings, who have spoiled their existence thinking that a ritual could accompany them to God; they have forgotten it is life that accompanies us to God, according to how we live our lives and only that. No-one else accompanies us, no ritual.

Well then, since you want to be able to understand and you aim at becoming aware of evolutionary strategies, you have to make all beings understand that either they grow (evolve) or they get hurt, period, that's all there is to it.

It's not complicated.

All beings must be sustained in order for them to evolve and overcome the dictatorships (religious and political) that enslave them. Therefore, it is necessary to prepare strategies that will lead them to attaining a free mind, vast and aware; not leaving them in ignorance – in that “fenced-in” separation that some would like – but helping them into an interaction of scientific and evolutionary growth that enables us to transmit what we know.

We must carry this process right through to the end to eradicate, through science, some of the diseases Africa is suffering from, the game of the “bad” people who want to keep Africa shackled.

Via a wise distribution of goods, both technological and consumer, one could secure wellbeing for the entire continent. Therefore, people would not be forced to emigrate and suffer in some other country, torn away from the roots of their traditions. Indeed, hunger is a dreadful thing, especially in a country rich with resources.

This objective can be made real. Think well. It's logical, but the opposite happens.

I have always believed that it was necessary to make free beings grow so that they could understand. At times, however, one just cannot wait for them to grow, one is obliged to act in any case and often, such action could seem to be violent and to exceed the limits.

If the negative pressure of evil in the system should become excessive, then perhaps the rules can allow one to start moving, because respect for the evolutionary process, for levels – always remember that – exists up to a certain point.

One must understand that there is a different, logical and precise way to proceed.

The logic and the Precision are given by the Perfection of the Laws of the Absolute.

Indeed, God is made like this: It is His Creation, His Perfect Nature. What He created is thus as it is, as you see it.

Obviously you do not see what, for now, is not necessary for you to know, i.e. the Laws to uncover that are already in the Base.

What do you care of the universes, all those universes that are not visible, probably you will see them in one infinite space, full of infinite events, of God's Infinite Reality...

What will change in you is your way of progressing through spaces.

“Walking” in the universe (because God wanted it so), and proceeding with a different awareness. Actually, this last awareness is the attainment of a vaster consciousness, tending towards universal consciousness, tending towards several universal consciousnesses, tending towards an interaction of several consciousnesses, tending towards the inner will to understand God and LOVE HIM regardless of the events that happen to us.

In truth, God does not hide Himself, does not hide His Self from the creature, but rather frees it so that it may understand itself, the entire system and the whole of creation in a unique – different – way.

You do not yet experience the joy of complete participation in creation; you barely experience the joy or pain of incomplete participation in yourselves.

An important phase to acquire is precisely that “oneselfness”, no longer limited but continuously being enlarged. As you broaden yourself, you broaden your relationship with the Absolute. By and by, each time it collapses, disappears, this figure, this image, this statue, vision, perception, identity or construction of the type of “god” you wanted (created by the mind) – the result of wanting to enter in “meditation” using a mechanism with a point of reference. Departures and arrivals already established by the mind, without being able to reach the Soul anymore.

Without any point of reference, how so?

It is closer to God because, not confining Him to any one aspect (as those who prey to little statues do) It loses the limits of rules and obligations, becoming the “aspect” of a vaster understanding, which considers each existence the ritual that leads God to His Self.

Each existence is that aspect and, in order to appreciate it, each one of you must become aware of bringing yourself to Your Self.

The other Your Self is God (always remember the relationship infinitesimal-Infinite).

You proceed with your existence and organize yourselves... for what?

You have to die! To whom do you take this “your self”?

To God.

If you are aware of this, then you participate more serenely.

You ask yourselves: “I am experiencing life with everything that happens. Who will I take this existence to?” In the end, to God.

You will understand that there are no limitations regarding how to proceed. We are the ones that organise limitations and enlargements. At some point, the “game” gets closer to what you are: an Angel, an Archangel... depending on the evolutionary period.

Your nature, whatever it was, will reveal itself to you.

Then the game, at times, becomes tougher because of the spaces of unimaginable freedom that open out; but at the same time, it also becomes interesting because one acquires the structure for dealing with each and every experience, organised by any sort of demon whatsoever, by any kind of adversity or impediment, pettiness, materialism and so on. This does not mean becoming invincible, like some sort of Superhero.

The beauty of it is precisely that of being able to remain free and normal, always.

The beauty of it is the ability to err, the ability to experiment, always.

Each one quite rightly will tend towards experiences in accordance with their own level. You, as everyone else, tend towards experiences fit for your level.

The difference between the level and the type of mental distortion is the following: the mental distortion is the nature to be completed as experience in the intellect. Many times the experiences accumulated in the intellect are not all-inclusive and definitive because they are incomplete.

If for example you had 98 experiences but you were meant to have 100 to complete your intuition, unfortunately, mental distortion stays with you. The freedom still remains to not gain access to the intellect because you lack that experience (which in any case you want to have) in order to make the right choice.

What is the right choice, if not the Perfection of the Law of the Absolute?

In order to have knowledge of the Perfection of His Law, the Absolute does not take away from you experiments and errors, namely your rightful freedom; therefore, if you are missing some information, either you get it or you will continue to believe that it's just a question of mental distortion.

Actually it is just a lack of information that is preventing you from being aligned.

Such a condition implies that at times, even though we do have the necessary knowledge, we behave at a lesser level.

Evidently you don't know the whole of it, evidently there is something you do not know. It depends on the person, on the individual. If something doesn't quite square, it doesn't square... in the infinite aspects of beings... each one has "their own mores and their own lesses".

I'm missing a piece of information, you're missing another piece, and so on.

If you want one euro to make a million, you haven't got a million! You'd say: "I'm only missing one euro!" Yes, but in any case you don't have a million.

"Can I be aligned with the intellect?" No!

This is why you seek to borrow information... can't be done, you have to experiment in order to evolve.

What kind of Avatar are you in dealing with this puppet of "I's and me's"?
