

ON THE AVATAR

(Part 4)

(...Continued)

It's all the same.

Why "is it all the same"? Because, the Door is no more. If there is no Door, there is no boundary. If there is no boundary, the Avatar and the being are the same thing. You want a boundary?

Build one.

But afterwards, when you poke your tongue out, sneer, and invent suffering in front of the mirror you will find "someone" who, in pain, will make the same sneering faces and poke the same tongue out at you.

Just look at yourselves suffering pain and be aware of your own inventions!

Do not invent anything more, it's pointless.

If you invent something, you'll find yourselves with your life slipping through those spaces occupied by you, without grasping Reality.

Many years ago I was asked: "What is happiness to you?"

I replied: "Happiness is when, though able to occupy all possible spaces, you occupy only those that God gives you".

Why?

It's all the same.

Which spaces would you occupy?

I hear some people ask: "Could I have a better space? I'm not quite comfortable in this one..."

But you are the one occupying that space because you chose it.

I did not say "the best time". Be careful.

Build a better space.

It is wonderful to know the Nature of All Things, the Truth, without making any effort to grasp It; it's wonderful to no longer have the Door that Separates the Absolute, to see no more the Threshold, find no more boundaries.

It's good to say "it's all the same..." And after the "same" remove the equality sign and say nothing more... because there is nothing to say: either you experience "it" or you tell about "it". But, in the telling, you realize you are mocking "the Other"

Absolute who is listening.

How's that?

Do you remember the word "Others" (in inverted commas and capital letter) used in the previous lessons?

Do you know what an Avatar sees?

When I look at you I see me in the mirror; I see faces that are all the same. It's always "me in the mirror". Is there somebody else perhaps?

Where is the other one?

Other who?

Ah, the "separated-in-their-own-home" on the other side! And those who are "all united" in one single point before the Big Bang explosion?

We were all superimposed in one “heap”, how dense we were! A density tending towards the infinite, a temperature tending towards the infinite... what a concentration! All in one Point. The Mirror is fused with Its “Observer”! Only in such a case, I assure you, the creation of a mirror was not possible, it just could not be.

Why? Because in that case, the Point was the Point, it was the Same Absolute and Creation at the same time; the precise condition in which the infinitesimal was one and the infinite was One: obliged to believe in the One!?

They may say: “No, I’ll go on not believing”, “No, for me God does not exist!”

Well then, proceed in your freedom, I’m sorry but there’s nothing I can do, for the moment I’m not going to concern myself with those who are beginning to understand. I am concerning myself only with Realized-Ones who have to prepare themselves. They have to get ready!

Where’s the difficulty?

I hear some saying: “eons and eons of seeking must pass...”.

They are mistaken! As the film is only spatial and not temporal, can we accelerate the spaces?

“Can we accelerate the time needed?” No, time cannot be accelerated, it is what it is. Well if you travel at the speed of light, then you could “accelerate” something, by “stopping” it!

Let’s accelerate spaces, and seek to reach the “Base”.

Be yourselves really deep inside you, let go of your whining, complaining and the will to occupy spaces for “dumb” people. Easy!

Let us establish that we are to arrive all together (let’s pretend “all together”) at a certain point that shows, not individually, but the sum total of your capabilities.

You might say: “I can’t, there are some things I don’t understand...”

I too understand some things and not others.

A nuclear physicist with a strong sense of humour once said: “When I teach none of my students understand. Therefore, don’t worry if you can’t understand what you’re reading”.

He was right! You couldn’t understand a thing. Then he added: “You should know that even I don’t really understand what I’m saying and the same goes for all the other nuclear physicists”.

Therefore... everything is ok!

It’s all quite simple: 50% of what “science” says has no explanation. The law of gravity has no explanation. It is not a force that is present; perhaps it is a force due to its “absence”?

What does this signify?

If you do not have the adequate basics you won’t understand anything and you’ll feel ill at ease.

“What’s the point of understanding if I’m feeling bad?”

Many of you make this mistake.

Understanding serves to grow and be well; serves to lose the “separations-in-your-own-homes” (universe).

Through comprehension we reach a certain point where we no longer feel “separated-in-our-own-home”. Understanding leads you to being the Avatar that you are.

Nobody can help you: on my part I only support paths directed towards inner, evolutionary religiousness.

Those I do sustain.

If you wish to become what you are I am here to help you, really I am! Just think what an effort it is for me to “help” beings “to be” and “not to be”!

The rituals and constructions of beings disappear, together with their worlds and their suns, and nothing remains of their living of MATTER and Spirit through “useful” words.

What is left to beings is the path that leads to not being; that is their original “primordial face”.

After they become realized they carry it around with them and they entertain themselves saying:

“How I suffered, oh how I suffered before I became realized!”

You had better hope not to meet me, because I will mock you.

I’ll say: “You suffered... To get where? To attain what you were? Oh, you poor thing!”

You’re like that imbecile who, all alone, is in the middle of a track in the stadium, on his marks and ready to spring forwards; he shoots the “starting signal” with the gun, throws it down and races off at top speed. He’s making a superhuman effort, but all around him there are no other competitors... and he doesn’t understand why he’s running.

Despite all this, he is there, agonising; he finishes the lap, gets to the finishing line, cuts it, looks around and ... nobody is there to see it all.

So, there he is, looking around as if to say: “How can it be that nobody saw me?”

It makes me want to appear suddenly, go up to him, tap him on the shoulder and say:

“Pardon me, but if you had stayed put at the finishing line you would still have ended up right here, exactly where you are now, after having raced all around the track! Why ever did you exert yourself so hard?

How did that being get to the stadium (Universe)? How long had he been there, playing this game?

After having seen that nobody is around, he gets on his marks again, picks up the gun again, looks around hoping that someone will finally see this “monstrous” discovery of his, and off he goes again. He reaches the finishing line and ... there is no cheering.

“Not even any applause? Nobody’s here!”

Think about it: how long have you been playing this game? Do you do it because you are sporty types? (Ironic).

“How long will it take before I become realized?”

You just keep on running, then, you never know.

In the beginning he wasn’t alone; he was running with the others, in a real stadium, competing against each other.

Then, when he moved from being physical, astral and mental to intellect he began to run alone to get to being the angel he was.

Except that he was no longer separate, he was Us and there is only one of Us for all.

This is why it's pointless to separate, it's useless to run; stay still at the finishing line and don't move... stay on the Threshold. Good luck! (It's called contemplation).

Run the lap, run! You'll see the fun afterwards!

Doing what? Nothing. Just be still.

The simple fact of understanding these things will lead to preparing yourselves adequately for the healthy path of a healthy being.

Live you life, your existence, do your utmost, have fun... but with that part of you that deep inside is able to say "it's all the same".

When you suffer, relax, keep still: you are playing with your mind. Move on to the intellect, move to the soul, find separation, go beyond... then you will truly know the meaning of the word Avatar. If you are able to... good luck!

I cannot say more, because it's impossible to abuse the freedom of beings who feel impelled to suffer pain, who insist on being "beings". Just "be", and that's all.

Do you want to proceed in "non-being"? It's your choice; I can't do anything about it.

You want to be helped to "not be"? With idle talk it can be done, but only with words.

With facts we have to carry out what has been established.

I have been asked: "Is everything that happens and that will happen established?"

Of course! Let's establish it, so then it'll be established! If without time you want to use verbs you'll be in difficulty when speaking.

There is a need for greater cohesion and greater attention to what one does.

More than that, we cannot do.

At times it is really tiring to have to keep certain harmonies in agreement.

Of course it is not you who are not the problem of these harmonies. You are understanding more and more that our effort has and must have positive repercussions and that much depends on you, on how you approach the matter.

Everything is aimed at successfully concretizing what has been arranged, according to your differences. Each one of you, inwardly, knowing themselves, will see how much they have applied themselves and will have to reckon with themselves. You have to square your own bills. Always remember: on the track you're on your own! It depends on you, on what you want to do.

Each being can quite happily, in their unlimited time and endless paths, think of numberless quantities of deities, but the Infinite Absolute is One. And now and again we have to remember this.

We all know that this apparent One that we value is not real (because it is of the mind). In fact, if it becomes manifest of Its Own Will in Creation and in duality and is conceivable as an Infinite Entity that produces Infinite for the very fact of producing, of necessity we have to experience duality, because it is Him Producing it!

I cannot deny the existence of "two infinites" (even of infinite infinites) for the simple fact that it is He that which Creates, therefore, if the act of Creation is by An Infinite, the same creation will be infinite. Thus we have the dichotomy between Creator and Creation; as I cannot allow such a dichotomy I am obliged to repeat "One".

Indeed, to affirm that something is in a certain way, in any case seems a separation. We come up with such a thing the moment we speak and, while speaking, we go against silence. Everything that is uttered is part of a dichotomy: in speaking (writing), indeed in “occupying” silence, we generate at the same moment “words and silence”, and thus we dichotomize.

Consequently we cannot speak without fabricating dichotomies and unfortunately, knowing words, we cannot remain silent without fabricating dichotomies.

Without either of them, how is it?

Dichotomizing is like saying: “I am the ‘puppet’ and, in front of the mirror, I see another puppet... let me just pull a few faces at it now!” or: “I am I, what does God have to do with it?” ...

Let beings have their fun with dichotomies; we dichotomize because it is necessary, but let’s remember it is only One.

Remove the Threshold, remove the equality signs of “it’s all the same” and what we have left leaves no space to the mind, because it is all Space.

I am only a waiter, now. After, if the Absolute wants to make the waiter a cook it’s nothing to do with me, I don’t care, it’s the same.

If the cook is made into all the elements put together in order to cook, I don’t care, it’s all the same.

Therefore, for me it is once again all the same.

Remember you must not leave out “it’s the same?”

If you do, there is no more the “we” you all say, that of the separated who say “we” proposing two distinct identities.

After that there is “I” and after that there is ... the Avatar.

I’m not concerned with such matters, I am only the “theoretical informer”; if afterwards the elements that make up a body become modified and predispose themselves to different functionalities... in entanglement all manner of things can change.

What does it take! Any being can have any entanglement; all beings are free to have them. After, it isn’t anymore the being on this side of the mirror smiling, after, it is the mirror smiling, and on this side there is nobody.

What film is this? (IRONIC)

Good luck and enjoy the process...

Consciousness increases and a little bit more of the mind is set in motion.

If consciousness changes the being changes; proceed serenely...

In any case, when you “propose yourselves again”, in your next lives, you’ll find “only” your highest, most evolved consciousness.

Once again at the finishing line, with the gun in your hand ready to shoot “go”.

Do you know how sentient beings run? They all run in a row. Bang! The gun is shot, they set off, and during the race one steals the wallet off another, another trips somebody up, someone kicks another one’s teeth in, one shoots... And they run, they run and they run, desperate.

One of them gets himself an army tank, another a bazooka and the world becomes a huge chaos. At some point for some of them, suddenly, two poles are out, finish line: dead!

And the others look on: "Have they had the funeral?" "Yes" And they start running again.

I watch them running like this endlessly, they run and they run, and for each one of them the finishing line is suddenly pegged out, and they die!! What kind of a game is this without awareness, without consciousness?

It's amusing! We should film it: somebody can be king or emperor, some can make war, another can be the priest, another can be pope, some can be those who hate, some can be angry... and while they are running, at a certain point we put up the flag. Dead!

Some will die slowly, some will catch a disease, some will end up on a stretcher...

Such an amusing game!

All busying themselves, with what? With not being Avatar! With being a common sentient being!

First you have to learn to run alone, to shoot "go" and run, and then you become seekers. Afterwards you will have fun getting others to bow to you; afterwards you will have fun organising religions... Enjoy yourselves! I think there's a lot you can amuse yourselves with.